

Steve Jobs was born in San Francisco, California, in 1955. He was adopted by Paul and Clara Jobs, a working-class couple. Jobs grew up in a modest home in the Silicon Valley town of Los Altos. He was a bright child who loved to take things apart and figure out how they worked.

When Jobs was in high school, he met Steve Wozniak, who would become his lifelong friend and business partner. The two boys bonded over their shared love of electronics. They built their first computer together, the Apple I, in Jobs's garage. The Apple I was a huge success, and it helped to launch Apple Computer.

The Rise of Apple

In the early 1980s, Jobs and Wozniak introduced the Macintosh, the first personal computer with a graphical user interface. The Macintosh was a huge success, and it helped to make Apple one of the most successful companies in the world. Jobs continued to lead Apple through the 1980s and 1990s, introducing groundbreaking products such as the iPod and the iPhone.

Jobs was a brilliant innovator, but he was also a ruthless businessman. He was known for his demanding personality and his intense focus on perfection. He was often difficult to work with, but he was also a visionary leader who inspired his employees to achieve great things.

The Death of Steve Jobs

Steve Jobs died of pancreatic cancer in 2011. He was 56 years old. Jobs's death was a major loss for the technology industry and for the world. He was a visionary leader who helped to shape the modern world. His legacy will continue to inspire generations to come.
