Kropotkin's Anarchist Vision

Kropotkin believed that a free and just society could only be achieved through the abolition of the state and capitalism. He envisioned a world where individuals lived in harmony, cooperating with each other without the need for coercion or authority.

“ "Anarchism is the doctrine that man is a social being, living in society by the fact of his birth and education, and that society is a living, growing organism, reacting upon every one of its members, and in its turn reacted upon by them. It is the doctrine that society is not made for the State, but the State for society." ”

“ "To make revolution is not to destroy, to kill, to shoot, to burn. It is to abolish authority of man over man; it is to bring about the conditions of a free development for every individual." ”
