For the Bride

1. Start by setting a budget. How much can you afford to spend on your wedding dress? Keep in mind that the cost of the dress may vary depending on the designer, the fabric, and the embellishments.

2. Do some research. Browse bridal magazines and websites to get an idea of the different styles of wedding dresses available. You can also visit bridal salons to try on different dresses and get a feel for what looks best on you.
3. Consider your body type. Not all wedding dresses are created equal. Some styles are more flattering on certain body types than others. Be sure to choose a dress that accentuates your best features and minimizes your flaws.
4. Think about the venue. The setting of your wedding will play a role in determining the style of your dress. A formal wedding in a ballroom will call for a more traditional gown, while a beach wedding may be more suited to a casual sundress.
5. Accessorize! Once you've found the perfect dress, it's time to start thinking about accessories. This includes shoes, jewelry, a veil, and a bouquet. Your accessories should complement your dress and help you create the look you're going for.

For the Bridesmaids

1. Coordinate with the bride. The bride should have a say in the style and color of the bridesmaids' dresses. She may also have specific requests for accessories, such as shoes or jewelry.
2. Consider the bridesmaids' body types. Just like the bride, the bridesmaids should choose dresses that flatter their figures. If the bridesmaids have different body types, you may want to consider choosing dresses in different styles.
3. Set a budget. The bridesmaids should be responsible for purchasing their own dresses. Be sure to set a budget so that they don't overspend.

4. Shop around. Once you have a budget and a general idea of the style of dress you want, it's time to start shopping. Visit bridal salons, department stores, and online retailers to find the perfect dresses for your bridesmaids.
5. Accessorize! The bridesmaids should also accessorize their dresses. This includes shoes, jewelry, and a bouquet. Their accessories should complement their dresses and the bride's dress.

Choosing the perfect wedding attire for the bride and bridesmaids can be a daunting task, but it's also a lot of fun. By following this checklist, you can ensure that you and your bridal party look and feel your best on the big day.
